LIBRARY RESOURCES
TO SUPPORT ONLINE LEARNING

5 Ways The Library continues to support you as you study remotely

ACADEMIC DATABASES

1

The academic databases are where you should begin your research journey. You may access full-text scholarly and peer reviewed articles, market research, case law and more through our range of database collections. If you need any advice on the best academic databases for your assignment or research topic please contact us.

BOOKS

2

Locate books on the library catalogue, and email us to order through our Click & Collect service.
You can access our eBook collection and read texts online, a link will be made available on the library catalouge.

LIBRARY MOODLE

3

In addition to our recommendations and guides available on the main library website, the Library also provides a range of supplementary material and tutorials on our Library Moodle page. If you want to build your research skills, or your understanding of academic writing, or plagiarism, take some time to explore these resources.

LIBRARY YOUTUBE

4

We have a range of tutorials and demonstrations to support your learning that you can access on our Library YouTube channel, and we are adding to these all the time.

ZOOM ROOMS

5

An important aspect of library services is the ability to have ease of access to library staff. This service can be accessed while working remotely, through arranging individual face to face meetings over Zoom. The Library also offers our popular smaller group labs remotely. Email or call the library to arrange a time, or call by one of our regular Zoom drop in sessions.
